Water District faces shutdown or a new bureaucratic role

By Elizabeth Cowley

State Senator Henry Mello (D-Watsonville) intends to propose a bill to reorganize or dissolve the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD). The MPWMD held a special study session on January 18 to discuss Mello's proposal although no details about the bill were available.

Helen Rucker of Seaside asked "How can the MPWMD be dissolved by the legislature when it was created by the people?" She further stated that any attempt to eliminate local representation would be strenuously opposed. David Laredo, MPWMD attorney, responded that the legislature can create, dissolve, or modify any public agency without putting it to a public vote.

The governing structure of the MPWMD Board, not its function, is believed to be the focus of Mello's bill. The current MPWMD Board assumes that changes can only diminish citizen representation. A new water board may not be required to gain public approval, through an election, for a water project such as the New Los Padres Dam. Currently the MPWMD Board is elected; a new water board may consist of Supervisors, Mayors or other officials or be appointed by the Board of Supervisors, city councils or other entity responsible to their appointors, not their constituents.

Director Karas said "We will not support a new board unless it is locally controlled and not responsible to the Board of Supervisors. We are not anxious to merge with another board; local control is the first priority." Karas further said that it was his understanding that Mello intended only to reorganize the board structure and that MPWMD staff did not have to fear for their jobs.

The Board agreed that it needs to clarify its mission and that changes to the MPWMD are necessary but it does not believe that the state legislature is the place to do it. Director Hughes said "The MPWMD Board should not be thrown out by legislative fiat. We were voted in and we should be voted out if that is the will of the people."

Director Ernst speculated that Senator Mello proposed this bill because of the failure of the New Los Padres Dam project which Mello supported. Director Ernst said "We have the political power and a lot of money...we could end up in a situation where we are paying for Fort Ord's water."

Pat Allen, from Mello's Monterey office, said Senator Mello had considered placing the dissolution of the MPWMD on the November '95 ballot but opted not to after a meeting with three MPWMD board members who asked him not to put the dissolution of the MPWMD on the same ballot as the New Los Padres Dam. Ms. Allen said Mello has opted not to pursue a ballot measure due to expense but intends to introduce a bill by February 23, 1996; no bill language has been set yet. Currently Mello is holding meetings with city mayors and managers within the MPWMD and will hold public forums in early February. Ms. Allen said "This is a sensitive issue and the Senator is interested in getting all of the input he can."

This year's Pro-Am hosts big name entertainers

This could be one of the best bands ever to hit the stage. Yes, that's right I'm talking about the Pebble Beach all star band. With names like John Denver, The Gatlin Brothers, Glen Campbell and Peter Jacobsen all playing together, how can you miss this concert? This one's not on stage, it's on the golf course. They will be playing some of the best courses in the world.

A Perspective about families & suburbanization

In the evolution of cities in America, commencing around the turn of the 19th century, the wealthy took advantage of cars and commuter train technology advances to sequester themselves far from urban noise, dirt and congestion to establish exclusive suburbs.

The new exclusive suburbs were exclusively residential, save occasionally a small retail commercial district to provide only basic services. Lot sizes and mansions were large. Each of these exclusive suburbs came with its own high taxes to support top notch public schools, parks and first rate city services - Bel Air, Hillsborough, Piedmont, Lake Forest, Grosse Point, Oyster Bay...

Zoning prohibited all industrial uses, except perhaps a service station. There were no condominiums or apartments. Servants either commuted by train or lived on-site in servants' quarters.

Starting after World War II, the example of wealthy suburbs became the model of Zoning Commissions, Planning Departments and developers throughout America. Cars, new highways, an urban flight mentality and government supported mortgages drove a massive suburbanization of America, with a small lot, a small house and maybe a nearby shopping center.

In the process, millions of square miles of farmland, wetlands, and natural habitat were graded under to sustain and perpetuate the American dream of a plot of land, two cars in the driveway and a scattered bedroom community. But, the dream is shrinking.

The suburban/semi-rural model for development began to wreak havoc at the very core of America - Community and Family.

Walking down to the corner for milk or aspirin became unrealistic; walking to school or church was usually not reasonable. Pried away from churches, synagogues, friendly shopkeepers, family and lifelong friends, the new middle class suburbanites struggled in their new outposts.

There were new expenses, gasoline, larger refrigerators to accommodate less frequent shopping, a second car to provide mobility for the household while the breadwinner commuted.

Encounters with family and old friends became monthly or less often. These were, in spite of the dreams of the suburban settlers, times in which nuclear families were pulled apart. Fathers and mothers went separate directions for work and millions of children were left stranded, in front of television sets or "hanging out". These were children who had no future in the suburbs. The baby-boomers, with their home lives scarred by the rapidly escalated divorce rate among their parents and the sterile, homogenous nature of the suburbs, ventured off to college or cities.

Two or three generations removed from community and family, the primary nuclear family is on the brink of extinction, the extended family seems to be alive only among recent immigrants and the steadfast.

Economic uncertainty, television, misguided social and corporate welfare, mobility and numerous other factors have contributed to the cultural and moral decline in America, which was centered in the family.

How do we recapture the vital role of the family?

1) A federal tax code that encourages the nuclear family;

2) Land development policies that discourage suburbanization - the root of family destruction, land waste, pollution and cultural acrimony.

3) Real national debt retirement policy (not a feeble 7 year plan to curb the annual Federal deficit). This will require radical, immediate downsizing of Federal, State and County public employment, radical cuts in entitlement programs and a much more efficient military.

We were given or sold the chance to pursue a dream of suburban America. In our reckless pursuit of that dream over the past 50 years, we have been caused to wreak havoc on the fundamental economic and cultural component of societal success - the family.

WHAT'S NEXT? Mel Vercoe

One of the nicer things about wars is that they can do wonders for sagging economies. WW2, for example, which miraculously cured the Great Depression, and then, Korea, Viet Nam, the Cold War, and some "in betweens". Bosnia may be too late, but we see good things coming to us in our area. We suddenly need more interpreters, which will keep our language school alive, no matter what, and if the war gets out of control, we might even need parts of Fort Ord for troop training.

On a cheerier topic, and to divert attention from Bosnia, we're getting nice pictures from the Hubble telescope. It was slow getting started, because it didn't occur to any of our great scientists to look through it, to see if it had been built right, before putting it in orbit. With, I believe, four billion dollars invested in it, we couldn't abandon it just because of a defective lens, so we spent a little more sending a crew out to it with an extra lens to make it work.

So, now we can see farther than ever, maybe all the way "to the outer limits of space", and I've wondered about that. Does this mean there's some kind of a wall out there, and if there is, what's the wall made of, and what's on the other side of it? We're also excited about another system that may have a Sun that has a planet with water on it, like ours.

Well, heck, there goes my theory that Earth is the only place in the whole universe that has life on it, including creatures that walk upright and sometimes wage warfare against each other, sometimes for "survival of the fittest" purposes, and sometimes to help win elections, or make sagging economies look rosier. And, maybe somebody who knows more than I do about religion can tell me how, if there are people on that other planet, can a Supreme Being keep track of what's going on in both places, millions of light years apart.

And, I guess that anybody who knows the answer to that should be able to tell me some other dumb things I've wondered about, like: how does gravity work, with a mutual attraction, however faint, between every particle of mass in the whole universe. And, how about light, and magnetism? And the light rays that traveled in reasonably straight lines for millions of years to reach us from those distant stars don't just come toward us. They could be seen from any place in the entire universe. Like I said, I wonder about these things. Does anybody out there know for sure?

A quiet look at the Goat Dairy controversy

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Our family moved into the Cachagua area in 1988 because it was an affordable beautifully quiet and peaceful place where we felt people "lived and let live." We have known Ana and Gilbert Cox for approximately seven years. We've enjoyed watching the progress and growth of their small dairy known as the Chevre Dairy. We often marvelled at the energy and dedication put forth to reach a dream that finally became a reality.

It's unfortunate to read about and see the anger and dissension being exuded by a small number of negative forces in opposition to the dairy. Indeed, before all of this started people were unaware it even existed.

Title 21 was drawn up after the Chevre Dairy was already in operation. Although it specifies a forty acre minimum, it doesn't stipulate the type of dairy animals to be used for a dairy. Obviously, the people who planned this stipulation failed to consider smaller dairy animals. Out of 52 counties in California, Monterey County is the only one that requires a forty acre minimum for dairies. Our adjoining Santa Cruz county has two goat dairies and cheese plants. One is on five acres and the other is on a ten acre parcel.

The negative energy and the waste of tax dollars being spent while trying to destroy one individual's efforts and livelihood could be better spent on communication and compromise.

In conclusion, we feel that residents should call Ana or Gil Cox and arrange a field trip with their families to view the dairy, chat with the owners, taste the cheese, listen to the sounds, and decide for themselves why a few neighbors are so adamantly opposed to this unique family business.

CHS graduate Wendy Angel

"Images of Israel", an exhibit featuring paintings by Wendy Angel is on display at the Congregation Beth Israel Community Center through February. The show consists of sixteen works in oil that Angel completed during a year (1994-1995) as an artist-in-residence in Arad, Israel.

Artist Wendy Angel, a 1978 graduate of Carmel High School, was born and raised on the Monterey Peninsula. She attended Monterey Peninsula College, and received her Bachelors degree from the University of California, Santa Cruz where she also completed a Post Graduate Certificate in Fine Art.

Angel has lived and painted in Europe, Hawaii and British Columbia, as well as the San Francisco and Monterey Bay areas. She recently returned with these paintings from a year's residence in Israel.

Arad is a small city of the Northern Negev in the high rocky desert above the Dead Sea. Irrigation allows Arad to be full of trees and flowers.

Wendy explains, "The environments I create in my work emerge from a relationship between what I see, think and feel, and the medium of paint. My relationships with people, places, and ideas are a part of my work. The paintings completed while in Israel express my experience there.

A reception will be held on February 8th from 7:30-9 p.m. at the Beth Israel Congregation Community Center, 5716 Carmel Valley Road. The exhibit continues through February 29. For information call 624-2015.

My computer had a hissy this week and the world as I experienced it was ended. In the course of getting things going again, I learned a computer doctor costs $60 an hour. If I should need someone to write programming code, programmer salaries in Santa Clara start at $90 an hour plus stock options in the company. The CEO of a company doing well enough to pay programmers $90 an hour expects an income 130 times that of the company's line workers. That's $11,700 an hour.

Secretarial jobs start at $9 an hour for experienced applicants. What a secretary can make in a year is not much more than what the CEO of a programmer company expects to make in an hour.

That probably does not bother the CEO at all. It may bother the secretary...perhaps enough to find out where to test for programming aptitudes.

Such a vast difference in incomes certainly bothers jobless victims of company downsizing: company officers now enjoy for themselves part of the salary expense of a once larger workforce, the balance going to shareholders.

In contrast, the CEO of the company for which my dad worked expected an income of "only" 30 times that of his clerical workers. This was in the days of carbon copies and Underwood typewriters, PBX plug-in connections for telephones, pneumatic tubes connecting offices in the building, telegrams connecting offices outside the building...a lot of essential jobs for more people. No typist, no contract. No telegram, no appointment. The CEO needed every employee; his career improved as their work improved, and it went like that for the 30 years my dad stayed with the company. The year he retired, the company disappeared in a merger.

Consider the possibility that former employees, now jobless by virtue of downsizing, have seen their jobs disappear in a merger with technology. $90 an hour plus stock options may constitute a form of hazardous duty pay for the survivors. It's quite a different vision than that of staying with the company for 30 years, and it is a vision which now affects us all, one way or the other.

COMPUTER TALK

More on modems.

The simplest and most common way to transfer text files is via the ASCII code. Word processors can almost always save a file in ASCII form - meaning that it contains no formatting such as bold, italics, etc. It is plain text with upper and lower case characters, and includes punctuation marks, numbers, etc. We saw in a recent part that ASCII characters can be represented by 8-bit strings of zeroes and ones, separated by start and stop bits. Another "parity" bit is sometimes used for error checking. Thus, ten or eleven bits are used to transmit each ASCII-8 character.

Nowadays what are called modems are almost always fax/modems, which share the same hardware and have separate software packages for the fax and data transfers. By data here is meant text and graphics and the modem can be either internal or external. The internal version is a card about 5" x 3" that slots into the motherboard or main board of the computer and costs about $10 less than the external one. The internal version is connected to the wall telephone jack and to a telephone. The external type is a small box of about 6" x 4" x 1" that is connected to the computer, wall phone jack, phone and electrical outlet.

The principal characteristic of a modem is its speed, with a transfer rate in bits/second or "baud". The fastest modems for ordinary telephone lines can, in theory, transfer 33,600 bits/second - 33.6 kilobits/sec - 33.6 kbaud. (A kilo in the computer world is often taken as 1024). However, most modems sold today are either 14.4/14.4 or 14.4/28.8 kbaud. The first number is the fax rate and the second one the modem rate. Almost all faxes in use today have a speed of 9600 baud. A very few years ago 2400 baud was fast for a modem but today these modems are suitable only for transfers of text. A typical page of ASCII text has about 3000 bytes or 24,000 bits so, in theory at least, a 2400 baud modem could transfer it in about ten seconds and 28.8 one in less than a second. Sending text even by a 2400 baud modem is vastly faster than faxing. Color pictures usually contain vast amounts of information and a 2400 baud modem could take an hour to transfer even a single small one. Thus, if you want to transfer graphics, and you will if you want to explore Windows based BBS or the Internet, buy the fastest one you can afford.

What makes a good modem? The ability to connect with, and transfer information at the highest possible speed to very many other modems and to keep the transfer rate up under poor (telephone) line conditions. Unfortunately most phone lines seldom allow one to reach the maximum speed that modems can achieve.

The next part will have more on modems.

Jarvis Group aims to enforce Prop. 62

The Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Association (HJTA) has announced formation of a legal action team to enforce the provisions of Proposition 62 guaranteeing voters the right to vote on taxes. The measure has been declared constitutional by the California Supreme Court.

On December 14, 1995 the California Supreme Court reaffirmed its own ruling striking down a Santa Clara County sales tax and at the same time reviving Proposition 62, a statewide ballot initiative sponsored by HJTA in 1986. Proposition 62 requires local special purpose taxes to receive approval from two-thirds of voters and requires general fund taxes to receive a majority vote. The most commonly seen general fund tax is the utility user tax.

Attorneys for the League of California Cities argue that the Court's ruling affects only future tax increases, while HJTA counters that tax increases, implemented since Proposition 62 passed, must be placed on the ballot, thus paving the way for showdowns in courts.

HJTA President Joel Fox warned, "Our attorneys will begin filing lawsuits if we do not see a good faith effort by cities and counties to put taxes, imposed in violation of Proposition 62, on the ballot. We are going to see that voters have the opportunity to exercise their clearly defined legal right to vote on tax increases."

The taxpayers legal action team includes: Trevor Grimm, HJTA General Counsel; Jonathan Coupal, HJTA Director of Legal Affairs; Larry Straw of the Santa Monica law firm of Straw & Gilmartin, who was a principal advisor to Howard Jarvis in the drafting of Proposition 62; Tim Morgan an attorney who practices in Santa Cruz and is a longtime HJTA ally; Jim Lacy of the law firm of Lacy and Lacy with offices in Newport Beach and Washington, D.C., who worked as an assistant to Howard Jarvis in the late 1970s; and attorneys from the Pacific Legal Foundation, a public interest law firm headquartered in Sacramento working to advance the cause of limited government.

The foremost responsibility of the government of any country is to protect the welfare of the majority of its citizens.

"Government salaries and benefits "provide" actual services and goods that benefit all citizens.

What are these "wealth producing occupations"? How dare you insult our family image by grouping "parents at home" on a par with "disabled."

Our governmental debt was caused largely by Republican actions, i.e. "Star Wars." Our current president has reduced the national debt and will continue to do so at a pace which will not harm those without "wealth". (I - with a great deal of education, honest, hard-working, decent have never achieved nor wanted great "wealth" - and was a proud parent at home).

That you would be so heartless to refer to "non-productive people, over 65 years of age, who will live less than 2 years following the major medical intervention" is absolutely shocking. What major medical intervention? How do you know this?

This will be unsigned, as you probably are a member of our local militia.

Ed - There is great irony in the fact that when letters are written in support of out of control government spending on government employees and programs, the writers beg for anonymity.

Carmel Rec Dept gives cheap/not free investment classes for locals

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Once again I will be offering my course, "Understanding Stocks, Bonds & Mutual Funds", sponsored by Carmel Recreation. I appreciate the publicity that you provided last fall and hope that you will once again give the course a mention in your fine newspaper. Once again I am teaching the course as a service to the community and donating my time in order that all tuition will go to the activities of the Recreation Department.

There will be two sections of the course. Both will begin on Thursday, February 8 and will run for five consecutive Thursdays until March 8.

The morning section will be offered from 10 a.m. to noon and the evening section will be offered from 7-9 p.m. Both sections will be held at the Vista Lobos Center on Torres between 3rd and 4th in Carmel.

Tuition for the entire course is $10 for residents of Carmel and $15 for those attending from outside the Carmel area. Registration for either of the sections can be made by phoning Carmel Recreation at 626-1255. Registration should be made prior to the first meeting since there will be a minimum number of students required in order to offer the course. Further information can be obtained by phoning Carmel Recreation at 626-1255 or by phoning me at 622-9522.

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

We are fortunate to have Zan Henson as a candidate for fifth district supervisor, and I look forward to seeing his much needed influence in county government. Zan has always been a strong advocate of environmental preservation and has worked consistently to save the Peninsula from unwanted growth.

Zan's refusal to accept campaign contributions in excess of $100 is a refreshing step in the direction of much needed campaign reform. It also underscores the point that here we have a candidate whose vote cannot be bought.

I urge you to vote for Zan Henson in the upcoming election.

Maritime Museum visits at half-off just for February

The Maritime Museum of Monterey is offering a special Valentine's gift to Monterey County residents. During the entire month of February, all residents will be entitled to one-half off the usual admission prices.

The Museum features entertaining and enlightening displays on Monterey's rich maritime history. Artifacts, photographs and documentary material feature our heyday years as the "Sardine Capital of the World". An authentic Captain's Cabin from an 1850's whaler visually transports a visitor back in time.

What happens to you when you do not pay attention to your navigational instruments is graphically demonstrated in the shipwreck section of the Museum. A Treasure Hunt for kids makes the Maritime Museum a wonderful place for children of all ages.

The Maritime Museum is open daily from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. and is located at the foot of Fisherman's Wharf. Plenty of parking is available in the city lot adjacent to the Museum. For further information call 373-ahoy. (2469).

For current information about the OHV contact the Monterey County Parks Department at 755-4895.

It's time once again for the AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am. It runs from January 29 to February 4, 1996. Last year's winner Peter Jacobsen will be there. Before last year's AT&T he had not won a tournament in over five years but yet he went on to win one of the hardest courses around.

This year's AT&T is sure not to be as muddy as last year. It was so muddy last year the Celebrity Challenge had to be moved to higher ground and that was still like playing in the swamp.

If Peter doesn't win I guess he will be playing the blues. You see, he also plays the guitar and quite well. He's played with big names like Hootie & the Blowfish. So who knows, maybe there will be a concert.

Where to see the stars? During the practice rounds, it is good stargazing at Spyglass Hill. You can get very close to the action.

On Wednesday, catch the Celebrity Challenge. At the Challenge you are so close you can almost reach out and touch them, if you will.

On Sunday, at the Pebble Beach links you will find some of the best vantage points: right behind the sixth green; on the hill at eight; or between the sixteenth and seventeenth holes. If you don't mind spending a little money, the grandstands at the eighteenth hole are nice.

For ticket information call 372-4711. Season tickets are $85. Day passes are $25 for Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Passes for any other day cost $15. You can also get a 12 coupon book for $225 good for any day. So mark your calendars and come down for the fun. who knows maybe we will see some sun.

Got Ideas about WATER?

Let's hear them!!

Express your ideas at a public discussion of community water supply goals.

Thursday, February 8th

6:30 pm

Oldemeyer Center, Seaside

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District will host an informal meeting to talk about community water supply goals. Issues to discuss and explore include whether solutions to our water supply problem should be:

- Comprehensive or phased over time
- Locally or regionally focused
- Water conservation or construction of new water supply facilities

Other topics of discussion include:

- What amount of water should be available for growth
- Project costs and environmental issues

This is the second of two meetings scheduled to encourage public participation and dialog to plan future action for the development of water supply alternatives.

February 8, 1996, at 6:30 p.m. in the Oldemeyer Center, 986 Hilby, Seaside.
